CONTRACT LET.—The board of directors of the "Concordia" awarded the building contract to John Walter. Contract price $400, to be finished by June Christian Blocker, builds the stone foundation for $50. The society made a happy strike in buying their lumber a month ago, as it has greatly advanced in price since then. The Hall will be built without delay.

IMMIGRATION.—The Mollie Mohler and Jeannette Roberts brought to our landing within the last two weeks, several families of Germans and Swedes.

From the amount of goods with them, and also from their appearance we should judge they were in good circumstances, and would make good farmers.

They procured transportation in town, and betook themselves to the towns of Waconia and Laketown, where they have friends, and intend to find homes.

These are the first installments of emigrants this season.

TO ASSESSORS.—The County Auditor has notified each town assessor to meet at his office at the Court House on the 24th day of this month. They should be there without fail, so as to insure uniformity in assessments throughout the county.

SHIPMENT OF FLOUR.—The Chaska Mill Co., made the first shipment of Flour to Eastern market last week. The Steamer Flora, came up and loaded on a thousand barrels for Chicago. It was all tribe X and will readily bring $17. per barrel in that market. An amount that will fill up "chicks."

NEW GOONS.—Miss F. Meyer has just received direct from New York, a splendid assortment of bonnets, ribbons, lace &c. They are charming, and we are anxious to see them adorn the fair ones of Chaska. Make her a call, and examine her stock.

LITERARY FESTIVAL.—The German Literary Society of Carver held their annual Festival on Saturday last, and we understand had a very pleasant time.

The Society is in a flourishing condition. We were unable to respond to their invitation, but hope they will accept our thanks for thus remembering the press.

SCHOOL AFFAIRS.—We would inquire of our school board whether they were not instructed to go on and repair the school building forthwith? Here it is getting well along towards summer, and we see no efforts to repair our building until it is done, we can not expect school. We hope the matter will be attended to at once.

RIVER NEWS.—The river is still rapidly falling. We now have a splendid stage of water, but we are fearful it will not long remain so. The favorite Molle makes her regular two trips a week to Mankato. Last week she took up the heaviest load of the season. 200 passengers and 175 tons of freight. Captain Holmes is in command, and Willie Mohle at the desk. The Chippewa Falls, Jeannette Roberts, and Julia, made their regular trips since our last issue, Freighting still good.

PAINTING &c.—Mr. James, has painted, grained, and otherwise improved the appearance of his house, and grounds adjoining. It was a decidedly perfect appearance, and is certainly an ornament to town.

FOUNDED.—A ladies breast-pin on the corner of 2d and Chestnut St. The owner can have the same by calling at this office and proving property.

COMBS & WHITNEY.—We had occasion to make a Seminal Week-

ness, involving sexual, and implements to Marriage, generally. Personal, and Physical Injury, resulting from self-

GODEY FOR MAY.—The May No. of

the most exquisite given by Godey during the year. In fact the fashion plates and its literary articles are such as only appear in Godey's Lady Book.

AS SUNG BY PARETA.

"Twas a pleasant summer morning, just the day he'd like it, enjoy. When he woke and looked out early, puzzled how to get up, he said, "Do you?"

So he would not come to see me, as he'd nothing else to do.

Of I started through the meadows, where the birds peeped and sang the spray. And sometimes I sang birds kept singing all the way.

Quite sure he'd come to see me so early here to go.

Till he said he'd walk over, cause he'd nothing else to do.

Then we sauntered forth together down the lane beneath the trees, and saw the shadows of their leafy boughs on the grass.

And when our conversation languished for a word or two,

Why, of course, he vowed, my darling, will you have me?

"Well," said I, "perhaps I may, dear, when I've nothing else to do."

Since the destruction of 4,000 bugging letters by Mr. George Peabody, he has received 1,000 more.

STURM SMITH, a lumber merchant, he is the most negro in Philadelphia. He owns twenty-five houses, and worth $100,000.

Mr. JAMES E. McROBBIN was attacked with a knife in the Chestnut Street Theater, Philadelphia, on Tuesday night, while playing in the fourth act of Hamlet, while all the lights on the stage. He was seen to run to consciousness, and was to play the rest of the night as usual.

In his Doctor Phisic book, entitled "The Art of the House," occurs the following sentence: "The stillness of the hour is the stillness of a soul calm at sea." Imagining the reverent author's horror when he found, after a careful perusal, that his copy had been printed, he said, "Such a calamity was made by the types to that Hamlet."

An Eastern paper says: "It is not generally known, but it is true, nevertheless, that General Butler married an actress, a negro girl, with whom he has lived in great happiness in the Concord. In his private relations, it is said, he is in all the knows. General Butler is a model man."

There is a description of M. de Laramont, which may be read with interest. The servant was shaking and swooning. The magnificient captain, a white ground, was covered with M. de Laramont's smile more than any woman, and the greater part of the day.

Mr. William K. Kersten, of Philadelphia, extensively known as one of the best telegraph operators in the country, by many considered as a champion, was not a little amused at the lightning speed of the Quaker code, and in a question to a questioner, gave the following reply: "I am not in a position to give you private information concerning the day at his own expense. He was asked, 'Why Brisket in the kitchen was Slow?' and I replied, 'It was told me that because the cook will hurry him.' To which Mr. Kersten added, "Personal but correct in the great success of the younger Brisket play, 'The Idea of Madam'—and the author, Mrs. Webster, wrote to me, as follows:

"Sir, Your writings are charming. I desire to write something conjointly with you to my published works, 'Madam,' 'Les Trois Mousquetaires,' etc., for my testimonial. The author of 'Dames'?"

Mr. Kersten, in his answer, said: "I would not read your works, the author of 'Dames' has of you, I have also accepted to accept them."

"ALEXANDRE DUMAS," a capital story of ex-Chief of England, that one who did not rest, waited on him, and with a view to the prologue, he was to be held in his grip, dry gravity. "If you dance with me?" The guest, a bird of paradise, who was anxious to make up with a certain youth, was very soon. "Stick to one business man," said to him, "and you may be great." "I am a Londoner, a man, and a miser, and he is a man who will be in the Gazette. One of my neighbors is a very ill-tempered man; he tries to make a fortune; and when I get it, I will give him a guinea. He thinks I am a fool, and for that I should give him as fast as I can. I always give a beggar a guinea. I am always a fool."

ROBACE'S STOMACH BITTERS, after a series of experiments and trials, have proved to be the best STOMACH BITTERS for all complaints where a tonic and stimulant are required. They never fail to strengthen the weak, impart vigor to the strong, and in all respects restore shattered and broken-down constitutions. They are taken with great relish, and are much faster as Robace's STOMACH BITTERS. In Chicago

RIVER NEWS.

The heavy rains this week brought the river up some three feet. Boating still continues good.

The Mollie Mohler now runs between

Mankato and Belle Plaine, connecting at the latter place with the V. R. R., making semi-weekly trips. The Chippewa Falls, Jenette Roberts, and St.

Anthony Falls ply between Mankato and St. Paul, and at present form the only line between those places upon which the traveling public can rely.

The Steamer Julia, Capt. J. Reany,

struck a snag and sunk near Mankato

last week, it is feared that she cannot be raised in a condition to be of future use.

Her Cabin is partly under water. The Hudson passed up on Tuesday morning with apparatus to raise her.

ACCIDENT.—We understand that Em-

ons Howe met with a severe accident on Wednesday last, that will probably lay him up some weeks to come. One of his horses kicked him, breaking the knee pan. It is quite a serious accident, and may lay him up all summer.

ASSESSORS.—We should have stated that the Auditor had notified the assessors of the various towns of the County to meet at his office on the 27th of this month, instead of the 24th.

ENLARGED.—The Northfield Record

comes to us this week enlarged and otherwise improved. We hope to see this mark of prosperity in our neighbor. We hope the citizens of North field are appreciative enough to second

Bro. Kimball's effort.

BAKERY.—Mr. C. A. Warner has leased his Store building lately occupied by Mr. Bennett as a Drug-Store, to a gentleman from St. Paul who intends to attend the annual session of the synod,

which convenes at that City in June.

He will be absent some four or five weeks. During his absence Rev. Mr.

Shultz will supply his place in the pulpit. Mrs. C. B. Shultz and Mrs. Newman accompanied him East. We wish them all a pleasant journey.

HEART AND HEARTH.

BY THOMAS BUCHANAN READ.

We sat and watched the hearth-fire blaze,
My friend and I together;
The wood of summer weather,
The wood of summer days.

It told of shade, of storm and sun,
Its native oakland story;
It told of the wood of the pine,
Who turned all gold to glory.

The creel carol still of noon,
With the sun's curses;

With the wood of June,
Ashes with golden tresses.

Within the fire a spirit seemed
To sow and sway and suffer,
While the wood of the beam
Beneath its altar lay.

The embers, in their transient bed,
Looked with transient tapers;

They raze through twilight tapers.

O'erstuffed fires the autumn walled,
In low and mournful tones,

Boys in the wood of the pine called O'er charmed realms of roses.

His eyes, once lit with battle-tear,
Adorned with warring scenes;

Their flashes of defiance;

But with a dreamy love-light blast,
Most luminous, great, tender,

As the wood of his heart,

Had lit with its splendor.

The voice that once his ardor proved,
Along the soaring column,

Now in the wood of the beam moved

Subsided, serene, solemn.

He named her—and the soft words can
In musical completeness;

At the wood of her name

Had touched his lips with sweetness.

We grow like what we contemplate—
And all the face was laden

With the wood of the pine.

The brightness of the maiden.

The moon, full blown to light-white,
Looked in, with long-porn pallor;

She saw the wood of the beam for its might,

He'll forget its valor.

She kissed his brow and smoothed his hair,
Like a consoling mother;

And the wood of the pine only wear

The brightness of another.

"Like Ruth, I walk his broad domain,
And with a longing heart, walked the wood of the pine;

I gazed high, but cast in vain

To touch his princely vesture."

With many a sympathetic guest,
The air, like the wood of the beam,

When to a wood of willow brest,

Dian stood transfixed.

She smiled on her Eudymon,

And with a wood of the pine,

And all the scene new glory won

For the sweet transition.

The vision fled—my friend was gone,

And left me only gazing after,

But the wood of the beam was shown

A future altar blazing. —Atlantic for May.

The Three Pellets of Bread.

L.
THE FIRST PELLET.

In 1824, towards the end of October, one young man were concluding a part of his life in Paris. The succulent dishes had been apparently well seasoned with wine, for all their faces were illuminated, and all were talking at the same time.

Now it is surprising that the meeting had been a jovial one. The amphitheater George Benier by name—only the second day lieutenant in the 5th Regiment of Dragoons, had unexpectedly inherited a fortune estimated at several thousand francs. Barely a month had passed since he had received, while serving in Spain, the news of the death of an uncle, who had left him to the accumulation of an industrious and well-endowed life. He had obtained his commission, had hurried to the capital to realize his fortune. He had invited only a few friends—chiefly college chums—that had been in Paris to participate in his happiness. He had nine, in a day or two, his heart full, as he had friends who were always plenty of friends. The banquet held in honor of this sudden accession of funds was coming to a conclusion, that is to say, the party were at their last, when a servant arrived, offering every one a laughing talk, or gesticulating, without concerning himself about listening or being listened to. The host, who was more interested, even than the others, in the meeting, had, however, had his head buried in his success, to set a good example, was endeavoring to get a word in concerning his feats of valor in the Peninsula; expatiating upon the assault of the Trocadero on the 1st of August, 1808, and the victory of Ferdinand VII. from the hands of Cortes, but every one was too happy to listen to details.

In the mean time, coffee had been brought in. The young man—George Benier was in his twenty-first year—was lifting his cup to his lips, when he suddenly put it down again with an exclamation of surprise and disgust.

"Garcon!" he shouted, in a voice that made the whole establishment start, "take this cup away at once."

At the same time, he pointed to two flies that had been stupid enough to take a bath in the hot fluid, "a bath which had cost them their lives." One of the garçons took away the cup, while another busied himself in the task of discarding. The guests were laughing heartily at the costume of the lieutenant of dragons.

"Ah! ah!" said one, "George is afraid of two flies."

But Prosper, a college chum, interrupted, "I am your friend, and I always had a horror of flies, and I became so skillful by dint of practice in killing them with pellets of bread, that I got the surname of 'Tueur de mouches.' I have not lost my skill yet; I can tell you; but if I assassinate this, that is not reason I should also swallow them."

"Well said," observed one of the guests; and with after-dinner thoughtlessness, and the love of fun natural to youth, he proposed that George should give them proof that he was still entitled to what he was pleased to designate as a glorious title to distinction.

To this effect a roll of bread was taken from a table close by. George Benier, as seriously as if he were about to solve a problem in mathematics, broke it took up the crumb, and began to prepare his ammunition. Having made three pellets, he had a hand placed on his shoulder, and a voice interposed—

"I beg your pardon, sir. A word, if you please."

George turned round in anger. The voice was well known to him—very unpleasing so—and he and his friend Prosper recognized, at once the man of the Café de l'Ami, the man with the gray mustache, and the blue eyes, the count Captain Rodet. Both were dandies, and the meeting was not agreeable—but the young officer of dragons, quickly recovering himself, inquired, in a haughty tone, what the master wanted with him.

"You have a right to the latter, in a tone of exquisite politeness. "I wish to return this to you, and at the same time to announce to you that, now you are so perfectly recovered, I will put it in your pocket, as I have done."

"We leave that to you—a pellet of bread is not precisely a conical ball."

In the interval, a man, apparently above fifty years of age, with gray mustaches and a coat buttoned up—evidently an old soldier—he had come into the café. On taking up a cup of coffee, he had taken up a paper, and was reading as he awaited his refreshment. The room was crowded with flies, half suspended by the approach of winter, and George had observed that the old man had come from the ménage on his arm, another on his sleeve, and a third had the impudence actually to alight on the very hand that held the paper. The guests watched the direction which George's eyes had taken, and the next moment his eyes occurred at the same moment to all that excited brains. This idea was mutually exchanged by nods and smiles and intelligent glances, but not formulated into words.

That would have spoilt the fun. George, encouraged by these looks of approbation, made his preparations for a grievous act of folly.

Placing one of the pellets on his thumb, and holding it there by the medium finger, curved into a bow, so as to act as a spring, he took aim at the right hand of the man with the gray mustache. But he hesitated at his credit, however, and he hesitated no moment, the ray of some flushed across his mind, and he turned round to look at his friends. But all he saw there was encouragement by nods and winks and smiles. It was such fun! Alas! how many foolish things are done under the absurd influence that there is something funny in them!

George's thumb went off; the pellet was shot, and killed the fly that lay on the spot of his hand.

"Mousieur," he said, addressing the captain, "unless you are impelled by motives of personal hostility, I cannot understand how you have been so bold as to exceed another in shooting on the part of M. George Benier. The insult was slight, you must admit, and is not your honor satisfied by the blood already spilt?"

But the veteran, never wavering in the invincible courage which he had assumed, and with his eyes fixed on George, he awaited a reply without vouchsafing a word.

"Captain," said the long-suffering there, "I will not accept my friend. I am ready to meet you where and when you like, and we will fight as much as you like."

The man shook his head.

"Very sorry, sir, but I have no more horses."

George rushed to the chase, and opened the door, to which a couple of post-horses were being harnessed. The master stood by superintending the operation.

"Monsieur," said George to the man, "I will give you a thousand francs."

"Speak, sir, replied the traveler, with an accent that did not belie his whiskers."

"Impossible sit."

"I will give you a thousand francs."

"I will make you repeat your cruelty!"

"And what is it to me, sir, if you are killed?"

The Englishman stepped out of the chase, and with characteristic calmness said—

"What do you mean, sir, by saying you will not accept my friend?"

"What I meant I scarcely know. Perhaps I am mad; but mad or not, it depends upon you to prevent me from being killed."

The Englishman looked hard at the young man, and then turning round as if to re-enter his chaise, he superciliously remarked—

"And what is it to me, sir, if you are killed?"

George, irritated by his contemptuous impudence, raised his hand.

At the very moment a loud noise was heard on the road. It was a post-chaise coming at full gallop. George heard his own name called out in a well known voice.

"Ah! I am lost!" exclaimed the young man; and a cold perspiration bedewed his brow.

It was Captain Rodet in pursuit—it was Captain Rodet.

George, he quietly unbolted his coat, and drew forth a card from his waist-pocket.

"At your orders, sir," replied George,

as he exchanged cards with his adversary.

Upon the stranger's card was gravé: "Louis Rodet, ex-captain of Light Infantry."

At the instant at ten the young soldier of the Trocadero and the veteran of Austerlitz and of Wagram met, accompanied each by two friends, in the Bois de Boulogne. George was a proficient in sword exercise, but he had not yet learned so well as the captain. After a few passes he gave up the combat, his right arm being pierced through and through. As the veteran left the field, he saluted his sword and dismounted with great courtesy.

"Stay, sir! Who would love me if I were fool enough to quarrel with you?"

Prosper shook his head sorrowfully.

"Alas!" he said, "stickness tries friendship; and love, too, does not well."

"The Madame de Belmonte would be come to me?"

"I am not yet to be a man," said the young man, "but that matters not any more than that I am a boy."

"Stay, sir! I shot it at you!"

Kentucky Election.

The Democrats in Kentucky have done nobly. The majority in the State is over 42,000. Prentice sends forth the following salutation:

With the Kentucky vote we send a glad greeting to the northern democracy.
We have fully redeemed all our promises to them. We stand proudly beside them.
We behold them struggling in the minority, but it is in no hopeless struggle. We see them gaining upon their opponents, making brave headway against them, and a confident belief takes possession of our mind that their triumph is not far off.

So it seems Prentice, who sustained
the war even through all the abolition metamorphoses through which it passed,
and was and is therefore "loyal" in "loyal"
estimation, considers the Kentucky election a triumph of democrats and not of rebels, and sends greeting to the northern democracy. The fact that a great many rebels returned from the war is not sufficient to account for so triumphant a majority as 42,000 over the conservatives and the radical candidates combined.
Prentice and his journal with his immense influence in that state contributed to the victory, and thousands of conservative whigs and democrats, and even federal soldiers like the brave cavalry commander, Col. Woodford, voted for the democratic ticket, headed by Helm and Stevenson. All these men are to be disfranchised, it seems, and Kentucky's ten democratic congressmen not allowed to take their seats, if we are to judge by Sam McKea's programme of contesting—Pioneer.

Booth's Diary—What was Done With it.

Washington Correspondence (May 14) of the New York World.

The Judiciary Committee in the evidence which they took to-day, disposed of of Ben Butler's laborious charge in the House that the diary taken from Booth's body had been spoliated by some high Government official (undoubtedly meaning the President,) with a view to destroy the evidence of complicity in the assassination plot. Colonel Conger, the officer commanding the company of soldiers who captured Booth, testified that he took the diary from Booth's person prior to his death, and that the book, which is a small pocket-diary of 1865, was now in the same condition as when he saw it then; the mutilation was evidently the work of the owner. This diary was filled in April, 1865, in the War Department, and it has been ever since—Butler's charge, therefore, only reflected on Secretary Stanton and Judge Advocate Holt; for the diary in question
had never been seen by the President.
Judge Advocate Holt will add his testimony to the same effect, to clear his own skirts, while it will at the same time, with the evidence of Col. Conger, expose another of the miserable allegations of the impeachers.

Democratic Rejuvenation.

From the Winsor Democrat.

It is a pleasure to state that at no time within the past six years has there been such a general awakening in the democratic party in Minnesota as at the present time. We speak of what we have seen and heard when we state that the tried and true democracy of the State are everywhere, from Winona to St.
Paul, and from St. Paul to Mankato, full of hope, energy and determination. Democratic Clubs are being formed and a general organization of the party thro-out the State is going on. Candidates for State officers are in the field for nomination even this early, which in itself is an indication of strength and confidence such as has not been manifest
for six years.

WHEAT PROSPECTS.

Although the spring is a little backward, the prospects of the coming wheat crop are flattering. A farmer living in Kasota township, two miles from this place, exhibited to us wheat sprouts of seed sown on the 4th of this month, which are now full two inches in length. Now if we can comprehend such a fact it will surprise even the oldest farmers of Ohio, or even Iowa. To sow wheat and in ten days thereafter to see the same ground covered with a beautiful green, is a fact worthy of note. Nature here has full sway, and pushes forward the crops with wonderful rapidity. We predict a larger crop in Minnesota than in any former year by one-fourth or sixth.—Saint Peter Advertiser.

As you like it. No, I don't like it, said the great man captiously. But you must like it, replied the physician, we have to do a great many things we don't like, if we would be as we wish to be.
You must take the pills. I'll be hanged if I do, said the patient. Then the doctor, No, no, said the patient; that will never do, doctor, I know under—give me the pills. The physician smilingly, gave him a box of Bryan's Life Pills, to be taken as directed; the great man was soon better, and eventually recovered.

The papers are praising the appearance of the Rochester Post in its new dress, but we cannot follow suit for we have not seen the paper. How is it,

MICHIGAN CENTRAL RAILROAD.
Extraordinary Inducements to Passengers Going East via the Great Central Route.

The Michigan Central is justly considered the model road of the West, if not of the continent. Its efforts are strenuous and incessant to merit the public confidence and good will, and in return, no road receives a more liberal share of patronage. There is no scientific discovery that can render iron track more smooth, durable and solid—no modern improvement that can add strength, better ventilation and more comfort to passenger coaches—no ingenious appliance that can make dormitories on wheels more magnificent, desirable and luxurious—which the Michigan Central has not adopted for the benefit of its patrons, regardless of cost. Rare practical sense, energy, enterprise, tact, liberality, good faith and executive skill characterize the operation of this road in all its business details. At its head is a management bold, initiative, not timidly conservative, whose ambition is to lead in the way of progress not follow in a path marked out by others. Its efforts are ever on the alert, studying, planning and perfecting all improvements and combinations to enhance the comfort, speed and safety of railway travel, and give to the public with greater facilities than it has ever before enjoyed. To the practical sagacity of Superintendent Rice of the Michigan Central, Thomas Swinney, General Manager of the Canada Great Western, and the well-known officers of the passenger trains of those roads in Chicago, the traveling community of the northwest, are under a special and special obligations for the convenience, comfort, and high rate of speed guaranteed by the newly-perfected time-schedule of the combined roads, which went into effect on the 12th instant.

THE RECENT "Summer Arrangement" adopted by the Michigan Central, Great Western and connecting lines, constituting the "Great Central Route," for the running of passenger trains through from Chicago to all points East, is one that will prove immensely popular. The new time of departure is as follows:

6:30 A. M. New York Express, Sandy's excepted.
8:30 A. M. Day Express, Sandy's excepted.
11:30 P. M. Expresses excepted.
9:30 P. M. Night Express, Sat. and Sun. ex'd p'd.

The above trains, it will be seen, all leave at convenient hours, and are so timed as to allow passengers, nights of undisturbed rest, and meals at first-class stations at regular intervals.

All of the above trains likewise make direct and separate connections to points East, thus giving FOR DAILY THROUGH TRAVEL FROM CHICAGO (or one more than any eastern line) to Detroit, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, New York, Boston, and other cities.

The 1:15 P. M. PAST EXPRESS leaves Chicago with a Pullman Sleeping Car attached; stops for supper at Niles; runs through without change of cars or baggage to Leland (breakfast) at 5:30 a. m.; reaches Suspension Bridge at 1:30 and Buffalo at 2:30 the same afternoon; annexes another non-stop sleeping car at Rochester, and arrives through without change to New York at 7:30 a. m., arriving there at 7:30 a. m., and so forth.

The 1:30 A. M. NEW YORK EXPRESS train reaches Detroit at 6:00 p. m. and Rochester next morning at 8:00 a. m., (Pullman's Palace Sleeping Coaches running from Detroit to Rochester without change) Albany at 5:30 p. m., New York at 10:00 p. m., and Boston at midnight. Passengers going to any local points along the line of the New York Central, will find this train especially convenient, as it reaches all such places in the day time.

We particularly invite all our readers to carefully peruse and study the attractive points of the above schedule. No arrangement could possibly have been conceived or fixed upon which could conduce in a greater degree to the comfort, health and enjoyment of a trip through from Chicago to New York or intermediate cities.

TRUCK, PASSENGER EQUIPMENT, &c.

The conversion of the railway track of the Canada Great Western, a uniform width of gauge, by the recent laying down and completion of a third rail between Windsor and Buffalo, has practically made this route a continuous rail line to New York. The entire superstructure of this consolidated route is substantially built, solid, smooth, and kept up to the highest possible standard of efficiency. Thus, the most rapid attainable speed over this thoroughfare is neither inconsistent with safety or comfort, while the adoption of the best system of modern car ventilation affords the passenger an abundance of air, cool, pure and free from dust.

The passenger equipment of the Michigan Central and its immediate connection, the Great Western, is unsurpassed for completeness by that of any other road in the United States. In massive strength, roominess, elegant finish and every other first class requisite, the coaches of these roads are perfect models. In addition to the new cars being constantly built at the machine shops and put in service, the Companies have just enlarged and improved twenty-five of their older day cars, which have been newly refitted after the pattern of saloon cars, and are the highest now running. The interior of each has been painted and upholstered throughout, the windows greatly enlarged and arched and the seats newly cushioned. We have never seen cars more handsome, comfortable and inviting.

Of the "Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars" running on all the night trains of this road, it is impossible to speak in terms too extravagant. Everything that genius can invent, art improve, good taste suggest and costly expenditure procure, has been lavished upon these wonderful achievements in modern car architecture. No railway carriage of old world Empires or Czar can surpass them in convenience and adaptation of internal arrangement to the uses for which they were designed, the beauty of their ornamentation, or the magnificence of their upholstery and furniture. In these cars are combined and realized all that the drowsy, trave' or invalid can imagine most conducive to nights of blissful ease and sweet, refreshing sleep. To spend so vast a sum as $27,000 on the construction and equipment of a single car like the "Western World" and other similar cars running on this route, seems at first thought a foolish waste of money. Yet George M. Pullman, backed by the vast resources of the Michigan Central and Great Western car works, does not hesitate to do it, and we are happy to add that the American people fully appreciate and reward the judicious liberality of such investments for their good.

In conclusion, we heartily congratulate the management of the Michigan Central, and its connection, the Great Western, upon the admirable arrangements they have adopted for travel eastward the coming summer (which cannot fail to meet fully the wishes of their western patrons)—and the public also, who can now avail themselves of such inducements and facilities as the "Great Central Route," as no other route east can offer in a superior or equal degree.

FOR THE PRESS.—For sale title the "Great Central Railroad, in Tremont House Block, or at the Central Depot, Post of Lake Street, Chicago, at all principal railroad cities in the north-west."
